Aaron Boone suffers high ankle sprain Also twists left knee

Aaron Boone on his back after 2nd quarter injury

Aaron Boone suffered a setback on Saturday after getting laid flat after a pass reception. He was initially out with a strained calf, but it turned out instead to be a high ankle sprain to his left ankle. He also twisted his left knee. For that reason he was kept out for almost the entire second half of the game against the New Orleans VooDoo.

The AirBoone will be visiting the doctor today for x-rays and may have to miss this weekend's game against the Arizona Rattlers, but he is hopeful that it was not a serious sprain and hopes that he will be back in action against Nashville. (On a personal note, so do I as we plan to go to Nashville to see the Blaze in action against the Kats...it is the closest Blaze game to Lexington, KY, where I reside!!)

May all of you keep Aaron in your thoughts and prayers today that he may have a speedy recovery.
